

Digital marketing and the law bootcamp, 3 June 2015

Richard Syers

Richard is a Lead Policy Officer within the strategic liaison department of the Information Commissioner's Office. Richard has responsibility for helping manage the ICO's strategic relationships with industry stakeholders in order to uphold information rights in the public interest and promote data privacy for individuals. Richard is particularly interested in the data protection challenges faced by the utilities, legal, financial services and telecommunications industries.

Richard has wide experience in frontline information rights regulation, having held positions across the ICO in enforcement, customer contact and notification. This experience has informed his understanding of the problems individuals and businesses face when complying with data protection law.